About ICBEB

The International Conference on Biomedical Engineering and Biotechnology (ICBEB), as an annual gathering, has been successfully held in the past eleven years. It aims to provide an extensive platform for researchers and scholars to present their newest research findings in the related fields, discuss the practical challenges encountered and recommend better solutions for human health.

The first ICBEB, initiated by University of Macau and co-organized by IEEE Macau Branch and Macau Society of Biomedical Engineering in 2012, attracted more than 200 participants at home and abroad, laying a solid foundation for its future influence all over the world.

ICBEB 2023 returns to its place of origin and features plenary speeches, invited speeches, oral presentations and poster presentations. 5th China Physiological Signal Challenge (CPSC 2023) will be held synchronously.

Explore Macao

Known as the 'Vegas of China', Macao is a history marked by a cultural hybridity that manifests itself in all aspects of life: Chinese temples stand on maritime-themed Portuguese tiles; the sound of Cantonese permeates streets with Portuguese names. Formerly administered by the Portuguese, this high-energy city on the South China Sea is world-famous as a gaming destination and has also begun attracting visitors with an increasing array of shows, entertainment, and nightlife. The city's historic center, with its rich blend of Chinese and European architecture and culture, has been designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

On behalf of the organizing committee, we cordially invite scientists, scholars as well as entrepreneurs to participate in the conference. Look forward to meeting you in Macao.
